Concept

The new collection of works made exclusively for Side Gallery is a continuation of Nebil Zaman's previous works in plaster. The scope of his creative process focuses on the combination of digital fabrication methods with handcraft methods. Zaman digitally draws or searches for 3D models that interest him. Once the designer is satisfied with the model, he sections the design in 2D, then laser cuts or CNC mills the 2D sections to create the parts, afterwards assembling the newly made pieces into a three dimensional object. The structural base then acts as a fixture to build up thin layers of regular plaster and wood glue, leaving the finished object with a smooth industrial finish.

Zaman explores forms and different typologies of furniture, as well as imagining and creating new ones. Certain pieces have clear and specific functions, while others are more ambiguous and open to other possible functions. The formal language and aesthetics of Zaman designs stem from a fascination with ancient civilisations, archaeological encounters, science fiction and futuristic visions.
